

Recalled Heart Devices

The information on this page is provided for informational purposes only. As of 2011, the Simmons firm is no longer accepting cases involving recalled heart devices. If you have questions, don't hesitate to contact us today.

Filing a lawsuit

The Simmons firm has experience in litigating complex medical matters. We have taken a leadership role in standing up for individuals who have been injured by dangerous or defective drugs and devices and over the last few years have represented thousands of pharmaceutical clients and recovered verdicts and settlements totaling more than $200 million.*

If you have concerns about your implanted heart device, we encourage you to talk to your doctor right away to see if it is part of the recall.

If your implanted heart device is part of the recall, please contact us for a free legal consultation.

Types of Recalled Heart Devices

Thousands of people around the world rely on implanted heart devices like defibrillators to keep their hearts beating at a regular pace. In most cases, these devices have, quite literally, saved lives. Unfortunately, many of the implanted devices have turned out to be defective.

In fact, because of the many defective devices, the two largest manufacturers of heart devices, Guidant Corporation and Medtronic Incorporated, along with the FDA, have issued recalls and notices to warn users of these unsafe products, including:
